This Associate in Applied Science (AAS) degree program prepares you for immediate career opportunities in the field of addictions counseling and treatment. The program will provide you with continuing education if you are already working in the field.

Upon graduation from this program, you will be prepared for entry-level counselor positions in alcohol and substance abuse treatment facilities and employee assistance programs.

You may also opt to transfer to baccalaureate degree programs in human services, social work, counseling, nursing or psychology.

The Chemical Dependency Counseling Program completely fulfills the education requirements for the New York State Credentialed Alcoholism and Substance Abuse Counselor (CASAC), a credential that provides you with more career and employment options.

To discuss this program in detail, call 778-5021 or contact the Admissions Office.
